DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language; or the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

Claims 12-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kimmel et al. (US 6,910,481).

The Kimmel et al. reference discloses an oxygen concentrating apparatus (see col. 3, lines 40-45) comprising a controlling means (see col. 3, lines 45-52), a recording means (see col.4, lines 46-65), an output means (see col. 4, lines 46-65), a prescription supply condition input means (see col. 4, lines 46-50), a detection means (see col. 4, lines 28-35) and a arithmetic calculating means (see col. 4, lines 35-39).

In regard to claim 19, Examiner takes the position that the apparatus is capable of being moved to the extend in which the associated tubing (not shown) and power cords (not shown) and operating during such movement (see also col. 3, lines 55-57).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 20 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kimmel et al. (US 6,910,481).

In regard to claim 20, the Kimmel et al. reference discloses a patient oxygen supply apparatus (supra), but fails to disclose an authentication check as claimed. Examiner takes Official Notice that many computer-based input/out devices conventionally include some sort of authentication check (as, for example, many computer based e-mail programs require authentication before permanently deleting e-mail files or even many computer operating systems requiring some sort of authentication prior to the deletion of associated computer files) to prevent the inadvertent deletion of information. Therefore, to modify the computer-based Kimmel et al. device to include an authentication check as claimed would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of Examiner's Noticed observation of conventionality.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The Lee et al., Farrugia et al., Fabian et al., and Remes et al. references pertain to patient support systems with associated compliance systems.
